PRESS RELEASE

One Wedding and a Funeral at the Black Country Living Museum

Monday 31st August, 2009

Forget Dawn and Garry's Eastenders wedding or Danielle's dramatic funeral - the soap storyline of the year takes place at the Black Country Living Museum on Bank Holiday Monday. The Museum's resident soap stars get hitched and also lay a loved one to rest but in the time honoured tradition of all soap sagas proceedings do not go to plan.

Florrie Froggatt finally persuades her sister's ex fiance Wilf Bradshaw to make an honest woman of her! And a funeral takes place without a body. Confused? You will be! There are more twists and turns in this Black Country saga than a ride on a hop pickin' train!

Entertaining storylines will keep visitors on their toes and they may well find themselves centre stage as they get caught up in the action! Humour, intrigue, love and loss are interwoven into this tale with a twist - bringing to life the relationships, hopes and aspirations of two ordinary Black Country families.

Fiona Carding Media Relations Officer said: 'The Museum has plenty to offer all the family this Bank Holiday Monday from a trip on a tramcar, a lesson in the old-fashioned school room, to street theatre and a tour of the underground coal mine. The Museum's costumed characters will entertain visitors with fascinating tales as they go about their everyday lives in the shops, houses and workplaces in the canalside village." -Ends-
